Cold Meta creative. Approx. 150 spoken words. Ladder format — the twenty-thousand tier walked first, then the hundred-thousand tier, beat for beat. Companion asset to the Enrollment Engine VSL (v2.1) — shoot on the same day, same room, same wardrobe, same lens.

01 The Script

0:00 – 0:58

HOOK

0:00 – 0:07

Six things separate a twenty-thousand-a-month institute from a hundred-thousand one.

None of them are the training.

AT TWENTY

0:07 – 0:27

So what does a twenty-thousand-a-month institute actually look like?

There's no offer — there's a price. So every conversation ends up being about tuition.

An inquiry lands Tuesday night and gets answered Thursday.

Follow-up is one text, sent by whoever remembers.

And when a seat finally sells, nobody can name the ad that sold it.

AT A HUNDRED

0:27 – 0:50

And the hundred-thousand one?

An offer she can't price-shop.

A page that sells the seat before the call.

A front door that answers in seconds and qualifies by license and state.

Twenty touches over thirty days.

The old list woken up before a dollar goes to ads.

And every enrollment fed back, so the ads learn who actually buys.

CLOSE

0:50 – 0:58

Nothing changed in the classroom.

One system, live in fifteen days.

02 How To Record It

TALENT DIRECTION

THE ONE RULE

Low and level — but fast. This is a list, not a speech. The ladder itself is the retention device, so momentum carries it: no pauses between beats, no warming up when you reach the good half. Roughly 160 words per minute. Never sound like you're selling the right-hand column.

- “None of them are the training.” — the only full stop in the whole reel. Half-beat of silence, then straight into the list. This is the line that protects their ego and buys the next fifty seconds.
- Both labels (“So what does a twenty-thousand-a-month institute actually look like?” / “And the hundred-thousand one?”) are signposts, not rhetorical questions. Ask them flat and keep moving — do not perform them.
- At Twenty — sentences run one into the next, tone dropping slightly on each. You’re describing something tedious. Should take about 20 seconds.
- At A Hundred — same tempo. Do not slow down, do not get warm, do not lean in. The on-screen detail sells this column; your enthusiasm would cheapen it.
- “Nothing changed in the classroom.” — the flat, final beat. Silence either side. It pays off the hook.
- Land on “fifteen days.” Matter-of-fact, almost administrative. No smile. Hold the frame a beat before cutting.
- Whole reel — one continuous take if possible. The comparison reads as one thought; visible cuts inside the columns break it.

On-Screen Text

EDITOR

Two columns, $20K/MO left and $100K/MO right. The left column fills first and stays on screen greyed back. The right column then fills beside it, numbered, one entry per spoken beat. Final frame holds both columns at once — that single image is the whole argument.

The right column carries the detail the voiceover doesn't say:

SPECS

EXPORT	1080 × 1920, 9:16, H.264 MP4, 30fps, loud-normalised audio.
CUTTING	Hard cuts only. No transitions.
MUSIC	None, or a near-silent bed.
CAPTIONS	Burned in. Clear of the bottom 250px.
CONTINUITY	Shoot on the VSL day — same room, wardrobe, lens, grade.
CLAIMS	No earnings claims, no outcome promises. The $20k and $100k figures describe institute types, not a promise. Results proof stays in the VSL where the screen recordings prove it.
HEADLINE	THE ENROLLMENT ENGINE — LIVE IN 15 DAYS

PRIMARY TEXT

There's no version of a $100k/month institute where an inquiry sits in an inbox until Thursday.

Same course. Same instructors. Six things in the system are different — and none of them are in the classroom.
